Section B 汉译英

Undergraduates, especially the first-year students, hope to improve their ability to express themselves in English. The question is which teaching approach is more effective. Students can hardly become interested in instructions if the teacher does nothing but repeat what the textbook says. No teacher can be regarded as competent / qualified unless students can benefit as much as possible from his or her lectures. The top priority for a teacher is to make students' use of English more idiomatic and accurate / help students to use English more idiomatically and accurately.

Section B: human beings are faced with various challenges, one of which is global warming. Excessive dependence on automobiles has accelerated the depletion / exhaustion of fossil fuels while increasing / adding to emissions of greenhouse gases. We are compelled to turn to alternative energy, such as solar energy and nuclear energy. Reduced consumption of energy does not mean a lower living standard, but instead involves updating of infrastructures. We are to look globally and act locally.
